

Turning Back the Tide

Ambassador Herbold is a principled leader with a long history of accomplishments. Beginning her career as a chemist, she practiced law for many years, served as mayor of Montgomery, Ohio, and from 2005 to 2009 served as U.S. ambassador to the Republic of Singapore.

In 2012 she established the Ambassador Patricia L. Herbold Endowment Fund, representing a powerful way to cultivate future leaders and give the most promising college students the necessary grounding in foundational principles and practical wisdom.

The fund was created by the Herbold Foundation, which is administered by Ambassador Herbold and her husband, Robert J. Herbold, former chief operating officer of Microsoft and now managing director of the Herbold Group, LLC.

Reflecting on what drew her to establish the endowment, Ambassador Herbold said, “I hope that through the work of ISI and other similar organizations, we will reach a critical mass of young adults who are imbued with our founding principles and who will turn back the tide of liberal ideology that is destroying all the good and wonderful things that our country has represented.”
